Van Brunt is the new President of the Florida Parishes Veterinary Medical Association (District 7). I know both of them will do a fabulous job!

There will be Homecoming Activities all weekend at the LSU-SVM (Oct 25-27). All veterinarians, family, and staff members are invited to attend the tailgating party on Saturday afternoon, Oct. 26th. The all veterinary band, "Sinus Rhythms", will be performing dance tunes before the LSU game. Members of the band are Kenny Arceneaux, Richard Broussard, Matt Crochet, Marc Bordelon, Marguerite Gravois, and myself. There will be free food and drinks,

As I have moved past the halfway point of my presidency, I must say that time is passing quickly and I have enjoyed every minute. It has been an honor to represent you on several occasions. The latest special occasion was the recent coating ceremony for the First Year Students at the LSU-SVM. It is always great to see the excitement as these future veterinarians start their veterinary training.

The Louisiana Board of Veterinary Medicine recently proposed new rules regarding RVT’s and veterinary assistants. From my perspective, this caused widespread panic among many veterinarians around the state. The Louisiana Board of Veterinary Medicine has since postponed these rules for further study. I promise you that the LVMA will keep a close eye on this matter when it comes up again.

There has been some leadership changes at some of the local VMAs. Marc Bordelon is the new President of the Acadiana Area Veterinary Association (District 5) and Gabe Ceva Animal Health sponsored a Media Training Workshop with Dr. Jim Humphries of Veterinary News Network on Tuesday, October 8th at the LSU School of Veterinary Medicine. More than 30 veterinarians and practice managers were in attendance to learn how to better promote their practice through social and traditional media outlets as well as what to do during a crisis. Lunch was provided by Ceva and the meeting turned out to be beneficial to all attendees.

Signalment & History: “Anna,” a 5 year old, female, spayed Siamese cat, presented with a history of a color coat change and a noticeable bump on her right tarsal/metatarsal region (figure 1). She had no significant medical history abnormalities and showed no signs of problems jumping or lameness. The mass appeared boney in origin, and Anna was referred to the LSU Oncology Service for further evaluation.

Clinical Evaluation: At LSU, Anna’s physical examination was unremarkable, except for the hard, boney mass on the right metatarsus. A laboratory database, thoracic radiographs and abdominal ultrasound were unremarkable. However, extremity radiographs (figure 2) showed an aggressive boney lesion primarily affecting the distal portion of metatarsal number five. This appeared to be an aggressive bone lesion, and a malignant process was suspected. Cytology of a fine needle aspirate was consistent with osteosarcoma. Anna was scheduled for an amputation, and the leg was submitted for histological evaluation, which confirmed the mass to be an osteosarcoma (figure 3, 4).

Outcome: Anna recovered well post-operatively and was discharged from the hospital. Her owners report that she has adjusted well to her amputation and is currently doing extremely well at home.

Review: Seventy to ninety percent of bone tumors in cats are malignant, with osteosarcoma being the most common and fibrosarcoma the second most common. Other potential differentials include an osteoma, bone cyst, and multiple cartilaginous exostoses. The treatment of choice for feline osteosarcoma is an amputation.

Feline primary bone tumors are very rare with osteosarcoma comprising 70-80%. The tumor is comprised of malignant osteoblasts producing osteoid matrix. Feline osteosarcoma is a unique disease in cats, displaying many different characteristics compared to canine osteosarcoma. Most cats with osteosarcoma have a long-term survival (years) with amputation alone. Additionally, there appears to be no additional benefit of chemotherapy for cats with osteosarcoma.

A special thank you to Anna’s family, Dr. Laurie Prange and Acadian Oaks Pet Clinic for their referral and support of our hospital.
